

March (is) for Peace

Interfaith Peace Witness • March 6 & 7

At this moment when religion is being used to justify war and torture, people of faith will hold a day of worship and witness in Washington, D.C. and across the nation. It is our obligation to be the moral conscience and compass of our nation.

On March 6th & 7th, the Olive Branch Interfaith Peace Partnership will come together in Washington, DC to:

- Organize informative and skill-building workshops
- Worship in a variety of religious traditions at services around the city
- Participate in an interfaith witness led by Rev. James Forbes, Rabbi David Saperstein, and Asma Mirza; including a multi-faith ceremony and musical performances.
- Engage in nonviolent direct action designed to hold elected officials accountable.

Five Years Too Many • March 19

United for Peace and Justice is calling for and supporting a set of activities on and around the 5th anniversary of the U.S. invasion of Iraq that will manifest the intensifying opposition to the war and help strengthen our movement. We hope this will be the largest day of nonviolent direct action and civil disobedience yet against the war in Iraq.
